The Condition of Accreditation
U.S. Accreditation in 2009

August 2011

The information presented here was provided by accrediting organizations during the 2008-2009 academic year and is also contained in the CHEA Almanac of External Quality Review 2009.

A national advocate and institutional voice for self-regulation of academic quality through accreditation, CHEA is an association of 3,000 degree-granting colleges and universities and recognizes 60 institutional and programmatic accrediting organizations.

I. Accredited Institutions

Institutions are accredited by three types of accreditors: national faith-related organizations that accredit religiously affiliated and doctrinally based institutions that are primarily degree-granting and nonprofit; national career-related organizations that accredit mainly for-profit career-based degree-granting and non-degree-granting institutions; and regional organizations that accredit mainly nonprofit, degree-granting institutions. Nineteen (19) recognized institutional accrediting organizations accredited 7,435 institutions in 2008-2009.

IV. Characteristics of Accrediting Organizations

Accrediting organizations employed more than 760 full- and part-time staff in 2008-2009 and reported operating budgets that totaled approximately $98,000,000. They worked with more than 19,000 volunteers who served on accreditation teams, commissions and task forces.

Accrediting organizations rely on volunteers in the higher education community and the public to carry out the important function of peer review. In general, these volunteers are unpaid (other than reimbursement of expenses) and serve on visiting teams, accreditation decision-making bodies and other task forces or committees of accrediting organizations.

Formal Actions Taken by Accrediting Organizations, 2008-2009

Accrediting organizations take a range of formal actions when reviewing an institution or program for initial or continuing accreditation. This chart indicates the types and frequency of actions reported by accrediting organizations arrayed by type of organization. Accrediting organizations do not use a common set of definitions for these actions. Please contact individual accreditors for additional information about use of these terms.

VI. Recognition

Accrediting organizations are “recognized” or scrutinized for quality by either the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) or the United States Department of Education (USDE). This periodic review is based on the standards established by CHEA or USDE for this purpose.

Recognized Accrediting Organizations (as of July 2011)

This chart lists regional, national faith-related, national career-related and programmatic accreditors that are or have been recognized by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) or the U.S. Department of Education (USDE) or both. Organizations identified by () are recognized; (-) indicates those not currently recognized. An asterisk () identifies accrediting organizations that were formerly recognized.

CHEA-recognized organizations must meet CHEA eligibility standards (www.chea.org/mac/Ob`ldkftflk\MLif`v*Grkb\5V\ -.-*CK>I>mac). Accreditors exercise independent judgment about whether to seek CHEA recognition. For USDE recognition, an obaf`gflk from the organiz`gflk is used by an institution or program to establish eligibility to participate in federal student aid or other federal programs (www.ed.gov/about/offices/list/ope/index.html). Some accreditors cannot be considered for USDE recognition because they do not provide access to federal funds. Other accreditors have chosen not to pursue USDE recognition.

Because CHEA affiliation and USDE recognition depend on a range of factors, readers are strongly cautioned against making judgments about the quality of an accrediting organization and its institutions and programs based solely on CHEA or USDE status. Additional inquiry is essential. If you have questions about the CHEA or USDE recognition status of an accreditor, please contact the accrediting organization.

This chart is updated when the CHEA Board of Directors recognizes or withdraws recognition of an accrediting organization and when the United States Secretary of Education recognizes or withdraws recognition of an accrediting organization.

Please visit the CHEA website at: www.chea.org
